What's The Purpose of This Report?

This is the 26th year that the Maryland List Report has been compiled and published. The report was begun in 1986 by Harvey Mudd, was taken on by Phil Davis in the early 1990s, and then was passed on to Norm Saunders with the 2001 List Report. After ten years of compiling reports, Norm asked for volunteers and Russ Ruffing has now assumed the reigns.

This year's report expands on the categories from previous years. New categories include Life and All-time High Lists for each of the calendar months, Month Closeouts, and Eastern Shore and Western Shore Life Lists. For fun, birders were also invited to vote for their top three "Birds of the Year." We hope these new categories will spur more interest from the MD/DC birding community; judging by the amount of birders submitting this year, it already has.

What's With Listing?

The keeping of bird lists – whether a Life ABA List, a home County List, a Feeder List, or a list of birds identified in movies – is just plain fun. And, listing fun is different for everyone. For some, "fun" means a full-on competition between a group of birding buddies to see who can get to 100 year birds the fastest; for others, it might be having and defending the highest State Life List. To others, it may simply be the joy of seeing a new bird in a beloved birding spot, and perusing the "ticks" on one's birding list simply recalls that moment back to them over and over again. The point is, we all do it for fun and each of us defines and derives fun from listing in our own way. The bottom line, though, is that bird lists represent birding adventures. And, really, isn't that what we go birding for?

Reporting lists in a report such as this simply allows all of us to share in the birding adventures of others. When we see others' lists, we can imagine how cool it must have been for someone to break a county year record, and how much time/energy/fun was spent or derived in doing so. We might wonder how they all got those birds, or how many miles did they walk, or how many hours did they spend driving, or how much excitement they had in seeing unexpected species, or how many cool encounters did they witness as birds interacted with each other, their surroundings, and other wildlife. The intrigue is endless. A report like this enables us to share those experiences in some fashion.

Is listing a competition? Yes and no. Would I like to be on top of some list? Sure, but it's ok if I'm not and I don't expect to ever be in that position anyway. Do some people get overzealous with their lists? Absolutely. But that's ok too, and it can be quite entertaining to watch that happen as long as people don't break the cardinal rule of not sharing bird sightings with others.

So, birders are encouraged to be as competitive or as laid-back about listing as they want. But most of all, they are encouraged to participate and share their birds and their lists with the rest of us! Hopefully nobody participates in this report with only competition as the sole motive. In that case, make listing a real competition and unplug from your computer, cell phone, and iPad. Forget about checking eBird or your email for recent bird sightings. Find birds all by yourself and see how well you do without the help of the birding community. Now, THAT would be a real competition!

Let's get to the report!

What Area Is Covered By This Report?

This report covers all of Maryland's 23 counties plus the District of Columbia (hereafter, when referring to counties, it is inclusive of the District of Columbia). The current maximum number of species reported for each county is shown on the respective county life list tables. Astute readers will note that the maximum number of species shown for each county in this year's report are higher – in some cases, considerably higher – than what was reported in the 2010 report; that is because an effort was made to update all of the county maximums to what is believed to be an accurate count of historic records and new records that may not yet have been accepted by the MD/DC Records Committee but are fully expected to be.

The following graphic shows all of the Maryland Counties plus the District. The demarcation line (not shown) between Maryland's Eastern and Western Shores is the C & D Canal in Cecil County. In Maryland, the C & D Canal begins at the MD/DE state line, continues due west through Chesapeake City, and connects with the Elk River. From there, the line of demarcation would be the center line of the Elk River as it flows southwest until it adjoins the Chesapeake Bay. Everything north of the Elk River in Cecil County is considered Western Shore, such as Piney Creek Cove, Turkey Point, and Elk Neck State Park; everything south of the Elk River in Cecil County is considered Eastern Shore, such as Herring Island, Hollywood Beach, Veasey Cove, and Cabin John Creek.

Comments on The Lists

It was very nice to see so many (106) birders submit lists this year. This is an increase of 28 over last year. There seems to be some excitement over many of the new categories, even though the number of birders submitting in those categories was not overwhelming. For example, only about two dozen birders submitted lists under the new month categories and Eastern and Western Shore Life categories (five individuals also submitted month lists for the District of Columbia). Many commented that they had an interest in the new categories but just didn't have the data available to them. With the increased use of eBird, the existence of some really useful eBird macros, and as birders catch up with their data entry of past sightings into eBird, no doubt the number of birders that submit month and eastern/western shore lists will increase in the years ahead.

There is no doubt that the month and eastern/western shore tables will change dramatically in future reports as these categories are populated by more and more lists. Though some of the higher month lists are no doubt solid totals, many of those shown in this year's report (such as this compiler's!) will likely slide way down or even out of the tables completely as more birders participate in these categories. It will be fun to see how and whether birders take to the new categories in 2011!

Black-headed Grosbeak, Denton, MD

An important change this year is that all lists ever submitted are eligible for publishing in the report...basically this means all the submissions that appear in the List Report Database are eligible. Those older records are valuable and so there has been no effort to "cull" lists based on age of the submission. As a result, this report is lengthier than one may be used to.

All Life Lists that met or exceeded the given threshold are included; when space allowed, additional Lists were also included in the Life List tables. Space also dictated how many Year Lists appear in the tables. For Year Lists, an effort was made to cut off the lists at major breaks or gaps between one total and the next, but this was not always possible. Hopefully nobody will be offended if their Year List for County X fell one or two short of the lowest list included...the compiler just had to use his best judgment, otherwise this report could be several hundred pages long!

Life Lists are indicated by the last year that they were submitted to the database. In some cases, active birders submitted updated Life Lists for some categories in 2011 but not for others (in most cases due to higher thresholds). The compiler attempted to get those listers' updated information for all lists for consistency but did not always succeed.

Year Lists are indicated by the year in which the total was achieved. You will note that combined tables for 2011 Year Lists and All-time High Year Lists were provided, but the highest list for 2011 is shown in red font in the tables for ease of viewing. Only the 2011 Maryland State Year Lists and the 2011 Total County Ticks Lists are shown in their own separate tables (i.e., not combined with all other years).

Statewide and County Life Yard Lists – only those updated in 2011 are shown because many older yard life lists are obsolete due to changes of residence, etc. It doesn't make much sense to include yard life lists for people that may no longer live at that location and/or who may also be submitting new lists for current residences. There simply is no way to know which yard lists are still legitimate if people didn't update them for the past year. Also, is there any real basis for comparing one historic yard list with another, as is possible with County, State, and Month lists, etc.? No, and for that reason, the compiler has left out all life yard lists that were not updated for 2011. The report does, however, include all-time high yard year lists.

MD Other Lists – trying to determine what location each of the “other” lists was for would have either been impossible based on the data available or would have taken an enormous amount of time that the compiler was not willing to spend. When easily known, the location is listed; otherwise, it is left out.

This is one category that the compiler sees no logical reason for including in this report, and will likely leave it out of future reports unless a good case can be made for including it. The very nature of this category prevents any kind of meaningful comparison between lists submitted for this category.

The following categories that were included on the List Report Form are not included in the report for the reasons stated:

Year County Closeouts - Some birders submitted only new county closeouts that they achieved during the year, whereas others submitted all county closeouts for the year, which was what was intended by the compiler. There was no way to tell which the submitters intended, so this category is left out of the report. Next year, I will try to make this more clear on the report form.

DC Yard Life – Simply not enough interest – only one birder updated his/her DC Yard Life List in 2011, and there are only 6 lists appearing in the database all time.

DC Other Year & Life – No lists have ever been submitted in the DC Other Year category and only three in the DC Other Life category since record keeping began.

Bird of the Year Voting

54 out of 106 birders that submitted lists this year also voted for the Bird of the Year. Each voter was required to list their top three birds of the year, and each 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place vote was assigned 3 points, 2 points, and 1 point respectively. Bird of the Year voting was a landslide in favor of the Green Violetear. This beautiful hummingbird outdistanced all challengers by garnering 1st place votes on 38 of the 54 ballots. No other bird received more than three 1st place votes. All species receiving votes are shown in the table, below:

What Listers Had to Say About 2011!

This section includes the comments and/or new Maryland Life Birds that were submitted by listers, in chronological order of when they were received by the compiler. When included, new Maryland Life Birds are shown first. Not everyone that submitted lists submitted comments.

Matt Hafner

White-winged Dove, Bell's Vireo, Green Violetear

Kim and I moved back to Maryland late in 2010 and this was a fantastic first year back. We bought a house in September so I'm submitting my first ever entry for a yard list. My big highlights for the year were seeing 6 new birds in Harford County, the Bell's Vireo at Turkey Point, the Le Conte's Sparrow at Swan Harbor, and witnessing an incredible night migration from a hotel balcony in Ocean City.

Leo Weigant

White-winged Dove, Black-headed Grosbeak

Texas in January: On the second day of staking out the "usual spot" for the black-vented oriole near Bentsen-Rio Grande SP, I was walking back, dejected, when a woman sweeping off her porch asked "Y'all looking for that oriole? He's in that bush right beside you." Well, by horned toadies, if she wasn't right! My only new Lifer for the year. I wanted to go hug her but was advised by a friend that might not be such a good idea. New Mexico in May: Watching green-tailed towhees out the window while eating breakfast near Las Vegas NWR; a "Lewis & Clark experience," i.e. seeing the woodpecker & the nutcracker within a mile of each other in the Tusas Mtns.; catching sight of a Virginia's & MacGillivray's warbler within a few yards of each other - - Rio Grande Nature Center, Albuquerque; at Bandolier NM - - a Townsend's Solitaire & pine grosbeak in the same tree; watching a goshawk pursue a robin from above - - Jemez Falls SP. Florida in June: Driving the length of the Everglades in a torrential Florida rainstorm & seeing overhead my year view of a pair of swallow-tailed kites bravely heading into a very strong wind at less than tree-top height over my windshield. California in September: A "Bell's Sage Sparrow" pointed out by a friend in San Benito Co. - - not a new species, but a never-before-seen bird never-the-less; and after a three hour run through dour & tumultuous weather in Monterey Bay the sun shone through and I picked up 16 new year birds within a few hours with Debi Shearwater - - over 450 for the year, with 3 months to go, feeling in high spirits for sure!

J. Tyler Bell

White-winged Dove, Leach's Storm-Petrel, Pomarine Jaeger, Cave Swallow, Black-headed Grosbeak

Probably my personal highlight this year was finding a male Barrow's Goldeneye on the Point Lookout CBC. It's the second Barrow's Goldeneye that I've found in MD! I believe it's a first for the PLO CBC and thanks to modern technology, 5 people got to see it shortly after I had to leave to continue the count. Also, thanks to Mikey Lutmerding, Jane Kostenko and I finally ticked Cave Swallow for our MD list in our own county.

Jane Kostenko

White-winged Dove, Leach's Storm-Petrel, Pomarine Jaeger, Cave Swallow, Black-headed Grosbeak

Dennis Kirkwood

Black-bellied Whistling Duck, Nelson's Sparrow, Marbled Godwit, Orange-crowned Warbler, White-winged Dove, Long-billed Dowitcher, Calliope Hummingbird, Great Shearwater, Le Conte's Sparrow, Barrow's Goldeneye.

I participated in the Rarities Weekend in November in Worcester County and found 5 state birds for the weekend. I highly recommend this to any state listers. My Other list is what I call a neighborhood list that is basically within walking distance of my house and farm about a five mile diameter in NW Harford County.

Did a Big Year in DC. I chased Gary Allport's "modern" Big Year record of 214 species as my goal. A great Spring (1st confirmed DC Mississippi Kite) allowed me to tally 180 species by June, and then a nice collection of summer DC "rarities", e.g. Least Tern, American Avocets , and Hurricane Irene birds (Cliff & Bank Swallow, Arctic and Common Tern, and Little Blue Heron) put me in a good position for the fall with 200 species. The fall was tough, but hard work with species like Clay-colored Sparrow Golden-winged, Connecticut and Mourning Warblers put me up and over the record with 216 species. I changed my goal with 6 weeks to go and looked to top 220, but then the warm fall/early winter slowed everything down. I worked hard to find Eastern Screech-Owl, and American Tree Sparrow to no avail. Luckily, I spotted a pair of Snow Geese flying over my office at lunch, and relocated an off course Dickcissel at Hains Point in early December. Note: To my understanding, the all-time DC Big Year record is held by Dave Czaplak at 240 species, but most DC birders lament that the amount of habitat that has been lost since 1983 sadly makes the record unlikely to ever be matched again. It's also pretty telling that even though a good group of about 6 birders birded DC quite hard this year, collectively, we were only able to come up with 234 species. Is the record unachievable? - no, but you'd have to combine a great winter bird irruption and a couple of good hurricanes passing west of the District.

Black-headed Grosbeak

Missed Green Violetear by 3 hours and never had a shot at either Bell's Vireo, so I continue to fall further behind. Actually, I just felt sorry for Mark and Jim and decided to let them duke it out for first place.

Jo Solem

White-winged Dove, Green Violetear

Three Howard County birds in a year (Least Tern, Western Grebe and Green Violetear) was an unexpected treat.

Joe Hanfman

White-winged Dove, Wood Stork, Purple Gallinule, Green Violetear, Black-headed Grosbeak

I had my biggest Maryland year in 2011 with 327 species and 3,360 county ticks. In addition, I had my second highest ABA year with 497 species. The Green Violetear in Cecil and Howard Counties was one of the top highlights. Missed a Smew in Ontario, Canada at the end of the year, but I can hope that it turns up in Maryland and found by Joe Byrnes, Jeff Culler, and me.

Bill Hubick

White-winged Dove, Common Murre, Wood Stork, Swallow-tailed Kite, Purple Gallinule, Long-billed Curlew, Sooty Tern, Townsend's Warbler, Green Violetear, Le Conte's Sparrow, Black-headed Grosbeak

Another fantastic year of Maryland birding. There really hasn't been a dull moment in Maryland birding for years!

Matthew Anthony

Ross's Goose, Cackling Goose, Redhead, Merlin, Black-headed Gull, Franklin's Gull, Black Tern, Rufous Hummingbird, Red-headed Woodpecker, Northern Shrike, Blue-headed Vireo, Sedge Wren, Orange-crowned Warbler, Hooded Warbler, Le Conte's Sparrow, Black-headed Grosbeak

I began birding when I was young (middle and early high school) and then stopped for several years. I got back into birding again at the end of August 2011. I have been splitting my birding time between my home county of Harford and my college in St. Mary's County. Because I only had three months to bird, I set relatively manageable goals of 100 species in each county, and was pleased to see myself exceed both of them. I have also enjoyed seeing my birding skills improve from when I was younger, and have the chance to bird with and learn from more experienced birders. Some of my favorite birding experiences of the year include: being in the right place at the right time when Matt Hafner discovered both the Tydings Franklin's Gull and the Swan Harbor Le Conte's Sparrow; chasing the Hunt Valley Black-headed Gull, Denton Black-headed Grosbeak and Harford Rufous Hummingbird; finding a beautiful male Hooded Warbler at Pt. Lookout; the really cooperative Barred Owl on campus who disrupted classes and posed for great photos; finding a spot tucked away on campus that offered great views of migrating warblers between classes; watching the numbers of Redhead at Swan Harbor steadily climb from 3 when I first found them to a high count of 46 in December. Because it has been so long since I have been actively birding, and because I question some of my previous sightings, I have decided to reset all of my lists. As such, the species listed in the above column represent birds that I know definitively that I have never seen before in MD.

Stan Arnold

White-winged Dove, Yellow-headed Blackbird, Wood Stork, Long-billed Curlew, Black-headed Grosbeak

In 2011, I became a close-to-home birder, after discovering the incredible potential of the Swan Creek Wetland and Cox Creek Industrial Park. I began the year with a property list of 195, hoping I would break 200 this year. This, it turns out, was done quite early in the year, and not only was 200 reached, but with the incredible birds that showed up, my year list for the location was 213, and my property list advanced to 229. I feel very fortunate to have found so much birding potential close to home, as I've grown weary of spending time in a car.

Kurt Schwarz

Ruffed Grouse, Western Grebe, Wood Stork, Black Rail, Purple Gallinule, White-winged Dove, Green Violet-ear, Common Redpoll

First off, a huge thank you to Norm Saunders for all his years of service in compiling this list. And to Russ Ruffing to taking it on. Within striking distance of the coveted 350 in MD. Also added five to my Howard County list: Wild Turkey (at last!), Western Grebe, Green Violet-ear, Lapland Longspur (finally!), and Common Redpoll. Most memorable was the Waterfowl Search I led on November 12, which produced some excellent rarities, though I cannot take credit for many of the good ones. In order of appearance that day: Winter Wren, Snow Bunting (thank you Allen!), Northern Shoveler, Western Grebe (thank you everyone, this was a joint effort figuring out this puppy!), and American Golden Plover.

Jeff Culler

White-winged Dove (350), Wood Stork, Green Violetear, Western Grebe, Northern Fulmar, Manx Shearwater, Le Conte's Sparrow and Black-headed Grosbeak

Another great year of Maryland birding with some really fine birds and the most friendly birders! To see 311 species in Maryland was special. With 220 species in Howard County I set personal bests in my home state and county . Good birding to all in 2012.

This is the first year I have really focused on local birding. While birding since 1980, I started a new life list on e-bird in 2008 so the life-list species are really not "life lists" but really over "age 50" lists.

2011 was another great year of birding in Maryland. I added three State birds (same as in '10), plus 9 to the photo list (still a number of "easy" misses to add there - need to watch your back Jett). Perhaps of more significance were the two additions to my Worcester list (Townsend's Warbler and White-winged Dove), bringing it to an even 360, a number we old-timers used to think of as a great State total. Reflecting on the new State birds, I see all three were coming to feeders!! Not that I mind, but I missed the one bird that was not - Bell's Vireo (congrats to Rob O. and Matt H.). The chips fall where they may. We have a fine group of birders in Maryland and it is a pleasure to bird and share with everyone. Thanks for the new categories, but note that my month lists are for Worcester ONLY. County month lists?? Indeed.

Joel Martin

Purple Gallinule, White-winged Dove, Green Violetear, Black-headed Grosbeak

So many highlights . . . Green Violetear, a dazzling gem . . . Purple Gallinule, an equally splendid visitor . . . a winter full of Black-capped Chickadees and a summer full of Dickcissels . . . a Black Rail calling in broad daylight, 20 minutes from my house . . . Lark Sparrow and Le Conte's Sparrow . . . wrapping up the year with Barrow's Goldeneye and Western Kingbird . . . working on becoming a better eBirder.

Jim Moore

2011 was my third year birding in Maryland, and I decided this was the year I would finally bite the bullet and start multi-county listing, which I think of as characteristic of Maryland birding in particular. Other birders' reactions ranged from disinterest ("yeah, a lot of people are doing that") to warnings that this would lead to obsessive-compulsive behavior and an endless parade of twitches for county birds. Undeterred, I set out, but decided I preferred a relaxed pace (I'm not looking to compete with anyone), and would only concern myself with county life lists (not year lists) and would not twitch any county birds outside my home county. This plan worked well and allowed me to pick the times I wanted to bird, but nevertheless move from under 2000 county ticks at the beginning of the year to over 3100 at the end, and from 2 to 31 closeouts. Thanks to all those who helped me learn how to bird the various counties, and to the growing number of birders submitting reports to eBird, which I found invaluable for planning outings to the various counties. Thanks also to Mike Ostrowski for making available his excellent macro for summarizing eBird data in a way that makes it easy to track one's multi-county ticks and closeouts. And finally thanks to Russ Ruffing for taking over the task of compiling the List Report.

Pine Siskin; Loggerhead Shrike; Iceland Gull; White-winged Dove; Common Murre; Dovekie; Nashville Warbler

2011 was the year I finally crossed 300 in MD! I moved here in April, 2007, and the magic bird was a lifer Dovekie on the February Sea Life Paulagics trip. After that eventful trip, I took a break from chasing rarities around the state for a while. I did go for the Black-headed Grosbeak on Christmas Eve on my annual trip north to New Jersey, but unfortunately missed it. A Pine Siskin at Warren and Lisa Strobel's house (The Birdcouple) was another great addition. Another highlight was finding my own state Nashville Warbler during spring migration at Brighton Dam.

Paul Pisano

Black-headed Grosbeak

DC birding was very productive this year, adding 6 birds to my DC list, 3 of which were terns (Least, Royal and Arctic). This was DC's first Arctic Tern - an immature bird found by Frank Hawkins at Hains Pt. during Hurricane Irene (pending MD/DCRC review). One of the other 3 additions was Mississippi Kite, which was DC's first reviewable record for this species, though not the District's first record (it, too, is under review). MD birding was not as hot for me this year, missing several great rarities. But catching up with Dave Czaplak and Mary Ann Todd while viewing the Black-headed Grosbeak made that chase even more enjoyable. My DC year list was not a personal best, but still a respectable 203. But this still pales in comparison to the awesome DC year that Jason Berry had (218!). He even surpassed Gary Allport's incredible year in 2008. Between 2nd place with Gary and now 2nd place with Jason, I think I'm better off playing wingman to anyone working hard on a DC year list.

Best for me was FINALLY getting Mississippi Kite for my "yard," the home where I started birding and where my parents still live. It is among my most treasured bird lists and new species are a challenge. I have been home in late May a couple times in the last 8 years and have always hoped for this species. This year I was home for only a single day in late May (26 May) but was working so went outside only intermittently. I got a phone call from a birding friend and told him I'd go outside to scan for kites while I talked to him. Only about 10 minutes into the conversation I had to scream and drop the phone, as a low first-summer Mississippi Kite crested the treetops. I had long suspected that I was right on the Ft. Smallwood flight line, but have never had enough time to watch and confirm. I know Ft. Smallwood had several kites that day. For my one day in the "kite window," it was a hugely gratifying county bird and yard bird.

My goal for 2011 was to observe 300 Maryland birds with no asterisk. In 2010, I made it to 300 but that included the Monk Parakeet. This year I totaled 320 birds; however, this number still has an asterisk for the Nutmeg Mannikin. And yes, my state life list includes two asterisks for those two non-countable species. 2012's aspirations include observing any new state birds which show up (hoping for re-runs of those I missed), achieving the threshold in most counties (moving targets that these are), and tallying a higher number of life and year North American birds.

Jim Nelson

Eastern Screech Owl, Black-capped Chickadee, Alder Flycatcher, Least Flycatcher, Mississippi Kite, Wilson's Warbler, Olive-sided Flycatcher, Merlin

The May MOS Conference in Garrett County added three new species to my Maryland lifetime list, but it was nice to get five more of my new Maryland species here in Montgomery County. Partly as a result of these new Maryland species, my 2011 list for Montgomery County was my largest ever. Most frustrating missed bird for me was the Purple Gallinule at Hughes Hollow in Montgomery County which eluded by on three separate visits. As a strong proponent of eBird, I want to express my gratitude to Mike Ostrowski for his Excel macro that enables us to get a wonderful analysis of our personal Maryland eBird data and to contribute to this yearly report more easily. And thanks to Norm Saunders for his many years of compiling this yearly report (and continuing to moderate MDOSPNEY to help us find great birds) and to Russ Ruffing for taking over the report and giving us more things to report!

2011 was my second full year living in Maryland and oh what a year it was. I spent most of my time in Montgomery County, filling holes on my county list and finding cool new places to bird. Highlights included getting a taste of my home state of Georgia with a Purple Gallinule (Dave P.) and a Mississippi Kite (Richard M.) at Hughes Hollow in May and seeing some of the many hummingbirds that made their way to the state this past year. I think it's pretty incredible that Maryland hosted 6 hummingbird species within 12 months from Dec 10 to Dec 11.

George Jett

Highlight for the 2011 was photographing the Green Violetear, and showing Gwen Brewer her 2nd state record of Allen's Hummingbird. She missed the 2008 bird, and I owed her. She is well worth the effort.

Evelyn Ralston

The Purple Gallinule seen at Hughes Hollow in May was undoubtedly for me the bird of the year. Not only was it gorgeous; it stayed around for several weeks, giving good looks to many; it was close enough from the shore for photographers to enjoy themselves; and it chose Hughes Hollow where parking is easy and a large group of birders doesn't faze anyone. Who could ask for more?

Norm Saunders

Best sighting of the year for me was the flock of 36 Black Vultures flying over our Cambridge community in late fall of 2011. Our MD Work/Other list is for our yard at our West Ocean City cottage.

Nancy Magnusson

White-winged Dove, Common Murre, Black-headed Gull, Purple Gallinule, Red-necked Phalarope, Green Violetear, Western Grebe, Manx Shearwater, Western Kingbird

Jim Green

White-winged Dove, Yellow-headed Blackbird, Common Murre, Roseate Tern, Green Violetear, Calliope Hummingbird, Le Conte's sparrow, Black-headed Grosbeak, Western Kingbird

It was another great year of birding in MD. It's always fun running into other birders in the middle of nowhere who share the "Listersitis" syndrome (No, I will not call it a disease). A special thanks to all of the non-birders that opened up their lives, homes and properties to allow MD birders to see the special birds that appear on their property, and also to those who took the time and made the difficult decisions to let others know about these rarities. My two special moments were observing the Green Violetear and the Le Conte's Sparrow. Both were beautiful birds and the Le Conte's was especially nice because when I was there it refused to succumb to the skulker stereotype and perched several feet off the ground for all to see. I also enjoyed the 2011 hummingbird invasion in MD. On a lighter note it would be interesting to see some listers categories for the number of different lists they maintain. I believe that Ron Gutberlet would offer to be a consultant in this department.

Carol McCollough

Calliope Hummingbird, Black-headed Grosbeak

It was a quiet year in Maryland birding for me. That hour commute each way put a real damper on extending the birding day, and meant weekends were often taken up with chores that can't get done after work, grrrrr. Resulted in a lackluster 191 species for the year. I didn't have much opportunity to chase anything, either. Even my first Worcester Rarity Roundup didn't produce many rarities, and I didn't have the time to chase on Sunday. Really frustrating, because I was sitting at 299 species in Maryland. However, when the calliope hummingbird showed up 15 minutes from my house I had no excuse. Within minutes of my arrival the bird came in to feed. What a great way to break 300! Figured I could relax until the end of the year, but wait - a black-headed grosbeak in Denton? 30 minutes away? 301 in the bag! 2012 has started off well with 302, but that's a story for next year.

Gail Mackiernan

Purple Gallinule, White-winged Dove

Peter Osenton

White-winged Dove, Purple Gallinule, Sandwich Tern, Nelson's Sparrow, Green Violetear, Western Kingbird

Birding in Maryland this past year was great, and I was able to add 6 new birds to my Maryland life list. The Green Violetear was an incredible find and a beautiful bird to be able to see in the state! I particularly enjoyed chasing these birds and the camaraderie that goes with it. County listing was good this year as well and I added 5 birds to my Anne Arundel County list, 2 to my Prince George's County list, 1 to my Howard County list, 2 to my Dorchester County list, and 12 to my Worcester County list. My work list for Patuxent Wildlife Research Center added 2 new birds for the year, thanks to Mikey for finding an Olive-sided Flycatcher and a Nelson's Sparrow! I added 2 new species to my home yard list, a flyover Solitary Sandpiper and a Prairie Warbler.

Jeff Shenot

Added 18 to my Maryland life list in 2011. Highlights included: Black-headed Grosbeak, Le Conte's Sparrow, Manx Shearwater, Northern Fulmar, Sooty Tern, Common Redpoll, Wood Stork, Long-eared Owl.

Best memories were the Black Rail at Swan Creek, Le Conte's Sparrow at Swan Harbor, Irene (storm) birds, and a Long-eared owl in a patch of pines in PG County.

Patty Craig

Golden-crowned Sparrow

The Golden-crowned Sparrow was a wonderful life bird for me, though it is old news since most birders saw it in 2010. The two Mississippi Kites I found at Pt. Lookout State Park were very exciting. Although they only qualified for year birds, it was the closest I have ever gotten to the species. That includes sightings in other states where they are more common.

Kye Jenkins

Purple Gallinule, Calliope Hummingbird, White-winged Dove

John Hubbell

White-winged Dove, Wood Stork, Green Violetear, Manx Shearwater, Le Conte's Sparrow, Black-headed Grosbeak

Besides the state rarities, my highlights of the year included the shorebird show at Morgantown in Charles County, a great day of September migration on Taylor's Island in Dorchester County, and the November pelagic.

Les Roslund

Black-bellied Whistling Duck, Wood Stork, Black Rail, Golden-crowned Sparrow, Lincoln's Sparrow, Calliope Hummingbird, Black-headed Grosbeak

It was fun and exciting to see the swirl of activity in Talbot county associated with the visit by the Calliope Hummingbird. Lots of folks even learned how to spell and pronounce the name. It was great to see how cooperative and polite birders were as they made their arrangements to see this special bird in the local town house community where the only access was from inside the owners' home. Great photographers swarmed in and got splendid photos which they graciously shared. Folks complied without complaint to the guidelines from the home owners about visiting times. And the bird stayed on and on. Great marks for the homeowners, and very good marks for the visitors too.

David Kidwell

Black-headed Gull, Black-billed Cuckoo, Clay-colored Sparrow, Green Violetear, Golden-winged Warbler, Olive-sided Flycatcher, White-winged Dove

Felt pretty lucky to see what was likely the last siting of the Green Violetear, luckily I didn't hit traffic! The mass chase of the Worcester County White-winged Dove the day after the rarity roundup was a great example of the benefits of technology. No way that would have happened several years ago. As much as I'd like to complain about being in Arizona the entire time the Black-headed Grosbeak was seen, I really can't since I got some great birds there, including TWO Rufous-capped Warblers! Looking to 2012, I WILL be breaking the 300 mark!

Elaine Hendricks

Cory's Shearwater, Great Shearwater, Audubon's Shearwater, Wilson's Storm-Petrel, Leach's Storm-Petrel, Black Rail, Purple Gallinule, Little Gull, Pomarine Jaeger, White-winged Dove, Calliope Hummingbird, Green Violetear, Northern Shrike, Golden-winged Warbler, Orange-crowned Warbler, Connecticut Warbler, Nelson's Sparrow, Black-headed Grosbeak, Common Redpoll

I had a very colorful year of birding in Maryland in 2011: adding Common Redpoll, Orange-crowned Warbler, Golden-winged Warbler, Green Violetear, and Purple Gallinule (among others) to my state list. I also met my goal of reaching the 50% threshold in every county. The last one was Wicomico (of course), and I did it with a memorable bird - a Hudsonian Godwit at the sod farm on Hampshire Road. Somehow, I ended up with a "personal best" of 308 species on my year list. My Greenbelt Lake list is now up to 141 species. The best new yard bird was a Mississippi Kite, which I just happened to see soaring over my neighborhood in early August.

Jim Stasz

Green Violetear, Black-headed Grosbeak

Without a doubt three sightings of a Green Violetear [Anne Arundel, Cecil, Howard] make the headline for Birds in Maryland, 2011. I believe these all were the same bird and with luck we may see it again in 2012. The onset of El Nino created Fall migration conditions that resulted in an above average influx of Western species, notably Bell's Vireo, Townsend's Warbler, Black-throated Gray Warbler and multiple Rufous Hummingbirds. A drought in the southern areas of Maryland was reflected in the lack of seed-eating passerines on some of the Christmas Bird Counts. A mild Fall in the northeast yielded a paucity of migrant ducks in the last quarter of the year.

2011 was a relatively slow year for me, in which I missed many of the birds that I chased or only got poor views. However, the year still had plenty of highlights. Some of my favorite sightings of the year included the Purple Gallinule at Hughes Hollow (viewed while standing on Mark Hoffman's ladder), the immature and adult Black-legged Kittiwakes on the November pelagic, and the Yellow-headed Blackbird in St. Mary's County. Some other neat birds for the year included the 1st winter Glaucous Gull at the Salisbury Landfill and the approachable Black-headed Gull that frequented the Best Buy parking lot. Other highlights closer to home included the group of five American Golden-Plovers in a muddy field in Clinton during the fall and the relatively long-staying Glossy Ibis at Schoolhouse Pond in March.

Rob Hilton

Black-capped Chickadee, White Ibis, Dickcissel added to my DC list for 2011.

Michael O'Sullivan

I added 43 Life birds for the State of Maryland. Highlights were my first Pelagic trip with 5 life birds (Northern Fulmer, Great Shearwater, Manx Shearwater, Red Phalarope, and Black-legged Kittiwake. Other highlights were the Howard County Green Violetear, the Barrow's Goldeneye at the Elms Environmental Ed. Ctr., Le Conte's Sparrow at Swan Harbor Farm, Common Redpoll in Howard & lastly, the Black Rail at Swan Creek Wetlands.

Henry Armistead

Arctic Tern & Calliope Hummingbird

New yard birds: Mississippi Kite, Arctic Tern & Western Sandpiper, a very good year since I normally average in recent years about 1 new yard bird every 1.5-2 years. My "worst" yard misses: Golden-winged & Cerulean warblers; other than that it's pretty rare stuff such as Ash-throated flycatcher, Clay-colored Sparrow, Snowy Owl, Eared Grebe, American White Pelican et al. My "worst" state misses are Lark Sparrow and Manx Shearwater.

Danny Poet

Black headed Grosbeak, Calliope Hummingbird, White-faced Ibis, Sandwich Tern

Great Experiences: in addition to the above new Maryland birds the Grosbeak and Calliope Hummer were life birds. Back in May I was getting ready to walk out my door as the sun was nearly set to go to a spot a couple of miles away to listen for Chuck-Wills-Widow . As I was heading to my car a Chuck Wills Widow called just steps away at the edge of my yard. Saving me a trip that evening and made a new yard bird as it migrated through.

In September, I was mowing my yard late one afternoon. I shut down the mower, went inside to get a drink of water, went back out and rounded the back corner of the house - at that moment a bird flew to the handle of the push mower and perched there - it was a Worm-eating Warbler! Another new yard bird. It sat for a while before dropping down to the nearby in-ground bird bath for a drink.

Green Violetear, (Audubon's Warbler), Townsend's Warbler, Black-headed Grosbeak, Le Conte's Sparrow, (Gambel's White-crowned Sparrow), Golden-crowned Sparrow. Birds in parenthesis were new recognized sub-species.

It was a fun year. I was able to get a lot more than I had been able to in recent years and it was good to do so. Trips with friends to the NJ Pine Barrens and California were especially rewarding. I finally knocked off Le Conte's Sparrow thanks to Matt Hafner's find in Harford after repeated searches over the last decade. There were some new additions to the Maryland State List and I was fortunate to add most of these, though I missed BOTH Bell's Vireos. Getting to see the Green Violetear at two locations was unbelievable. The fact that this (presumably) same bird was found and photographed at THREE DIFFERENT locations in THREE DIFFERENT COUNTIES is incredible. This first finding alone should make it the hands down winner for bird of the year, but to find it at 3 locations should leave no argument. Granted, it is a hummingbird and easily drawn to feeders where it will be more likely sighted, but it's still amazing to have this occur. Maryland adding Bell's Vireo to its official list with two different birds showing up makes that my number two bird(s) of the year choice. The far wandering Golden-crowned Sparrow from last winter would be my third choice. Swann Creek in Anne Arundel County had a phenomenal year with some great birds. The Long-billed highlight that few managed to see would have to be the highlight for the year for Anne Arundel, but birds like Black Rail, a bunch of shorebirds and Black Skimmer gave county listers a chance to add numerous species that are otherwise difficult to get in this county. If we had to pick a birding location of the year for the state, this would be my first nominee. Thanks has to be given to Russ Ruffing for taking over the helm of keeping this annual list report going. It's a lot of work and generally thankless. We should also send out a thank you to Mike Ostrowski for creating the Excel Macro that makes gathering all the eBird entries into one spreadsheet and generating the data into a useful and informative spreadsheet. For those that don't keep track of at least some of this information it makes completing this form a WHOLE lot easier.

Barnacle Goose, Green Violetear, Black-headed Grosbeak, Wood Stork, White-winged Dove, Townsend's Warbler, Le Conte's Sparrow

Best memory of 2011 = I finally reached 5000 total ticks in 2011, so I can bird more on the Eastern Shore in 2012.

Green Violetear, Bell's Vireo, Black-headed Grosbeak

Gwen Brewer

White-winged Dove, Green Violetear, Allen's Hummingbird, Black-headed Grosbeak

Many thanks to the generous property owners that were so excited about their rare hummers and White-winged Dove! An interesting year for rarities in Charles County.

My best memories were finding the Black-headed Gull in the Hunt Valley Mall parking lot on December 9th...and without having a binocular with me! What a great bird to find when you're not even really looking. I'm happy that so many hundreds of birders got to see that bird through February 2012. I saw a female Evening Grosbeak at my neighbor's feeder in April. Per eBird, this species was statistically the LEAST-OBSERVED bird of all 359 species observed in Maryland in 2011! I also enjoyed finally seeing the White-winged Dove in Frederick County after 3 or 4 unsuccessful trips, and seeing the Black-headed Grosbeak on the final day that it was seen. I also got the Howard County Green Violetear before it departed. I get a big bang out of finding unexpected yard birds...and to that end, I REALLY enjoyed such new yard birds as a migrating Yellow-throated Warbler in September and a very late Chat in October. Other great additions to the yard list were a Merlin in April and a Blue Grosbeak in May...a total of 27 new yard birds in 2011!
